

Cabbage palms are the most common native palm in Florida, and Florida's state tree. Cabbage palms produce hundreds of small round black berries every fall. These berries are a major food source for many animals, including raccoons and robins.